VANCOUVER (CP) - Opposi tion Leader Diefenbaker said Wednesday night that dissension within the Liberal cabinet-such as that concerning the George Victor Spencer spy controversy could bring about the fall of

The Progressive Conservative party leader arrived by plane for a few days of fishing before speaking at the British Columbia party convention here Saturday. At a press conference, most of the questioning revolved around the case of the postal worker linked to expelled Russian diplomats and the reversal by the Liberal government of its stand against a full-scale hearing on matter.

the matter.

He was asked "Is the government crumbling." He replied: "I can't conceive any government able to continue for any length of time with the cracks and crevices that have been evident."

Diefenbaker mentioned that Justice Minister Cardin had said the Spencer matter would not be opened, to be followed by Prime Minister Pearson bowing to Conservative demands for

"You ean't heal schisms like that," Mr. Diefenbaker said. 'IS IT FINAL'

"When a minister makes a decision from now on, the question will be 'is this the final decision nearly the final one"

He said the government had "no other course open to them" but to resign "if they had followed constitutional principle. Mr. Diefenbaker said any inquiry into the Spencer case or the whole question of security of the country, would have to be conducted in private.

"As far as the RCMP is concerned . . . I have a tremendous regard and respect for that body. I hope any investigation that takes place will support my view of that force." After the press conference Mr. Diefenbaker was presented with a deerstalker cap.

He donned the double-peaked, Sherlock Holmes-type headgear for photographers and termed it a "Liberal minister's cap—when you've got it on nobody knows which way you're going.

Defuse John

His objective, presumably, was to defuse John Diefenbaker and if all had gone as planned 'Mike' Pearson would have once again been credited with reducing a self-generated crisis to reconcil-able proportions. It was the perfect diplomatic ploy.

But this time, the ploy didn't work. Instead of genteel applause, Pearson was forced to harvest some harsh abuse from his colleagues. The mystique of his leadership has evaporated. It was discipline as much as loyalty which kept the Liberals solidly behind Pearson Wednesday's caucus session. The difference between the Spencer affair and his many previous diplomatic retreats is that this time Pearson-didn't just make the worst of a bad situation. He also undermined the authority of at least three of his ministers—Lucien Cardin, Larry Pennell and Jean Marchand -who had been guilty of nothing more than loyally and convincingly advancing government policy.

Public Undercut

In trying to rationalize the prime minister's strange behavior over the past few days, most parliamentary veterans feel that there are only two possible interpretations. Either the prime minister knew what he was doing when he publicly undercut his col-leagues or he didn't.

It's impossible to credit the idea that Pearson was fully aware of the effects of his public reversal in policy, since this implies he is Machiavellian enough to deliberately place his old friend Lucien

Image Fades

By yielding totally to the Conservative leader's demands on the Spencer case and at the same time undermining Cardin, Pearson has resolved the classic confrontation between himelf and Dief-enbaker which has marked the past four parliaments. minister; it is not often that this is necessary.

But there can be little doubt that Justice Minister Cardin had got himself into an untenable position in regard to the Spencer spying case. It was equally clear that to respond to widespread public concern, to preserve the government from a possibly unfavorable confidence vote, and to get the departmental appropriations through Parliament before Wednesday's critical deadline, there would have to be a reversal of his stand that no enquiry into any aspect of the case, or the security situation in general, should be made.

Mr. Cardin's embarrassment originated at an earlier date. He had gone too far in a broadcast in naming Mr. Spencer—even though Mr. Spencer had already named himself -and in declaring that the former postal clerk would remain under continuing police surveillance. It was a gaffe reminiscent of some of the public statement's of Mr. Cardin's predecessor, Mr. Favreau, and it presented a man who ostensibly deserved little sympathy, as having had his individual rights infringed.

When is added to such a situation the divided opinion not only of some Liberal backbenchers but also of ministers, and the ery of the opposition hunting pack, the only

> The actual fate of Mr. Spencer now appears secondary, as the enquiry gets under way and the House returns to its work. What emerges as important now is not so much the government's action in regard to the man investigated for involvement with a foreign government - since his only protest, after a lapse of time, was in regard to his lost employment pension - as the way in which the case was handled and the public's distrust of police secrecy no matter how well established it may

This is a healthful condition for any country. When the people cease to be stirred by charges that their rights are being subjected to bureaucratic abuse, then there will be little hope for democracy. Too many other nations have found this to their sorrow, and the world's.

Containment, but not isolation, was the basic theme of Professor Barnett's thesis and there may be significance in the fact that none of the senators on the committee despite the wide variety of their views on Viet Nam, challenged this idea.

Born in Shanghai, well informed on China and now acting as director of Columbia's Far East Asian Institute, Professor Barnett called for "basic changes in the overall United States policy toward Communist China." He described the American attempt to isolate China in the world as both "unwise" and "unsuccessful." And he disagreed broadly with the Johnson administration's "current attempt to maximize the danger of aggression" which China presents to the world.

His strongest warning that cur-

Professor Barnett's words have considerable application to Canada, which so far has gone along with the United States in its refusal to recognize the government of mainland China, a nation containing a fifth of the world's population. While it would be diplomatically difficult -perhaps impossible-for Canada to extend recognition to Red China at this time, it is something that should happen when conditions make it feasible.

Recognition of China by Canada not a step that must wait for American initiative. The eventual defeat of American policy in the United Nations was foreshadowed in the last two votes on admission of China to that organization. Canada should not be caught in the tumbling ruins of a non-recognition policy or it will be criticized for having no foreign policy independent from that rent policy is wrong was: "Unless of its more powerful neighbor.

The Backbenchers Could Have Told Them

THE prime minister, having agreed on Friday to a judicial inquiry into the encer case, has now gone far beyond his original proposal in the House of Com-mons. There were two surprises in Monday's a n n o uncement. De spite earlier indications that the com-missioner would be given restrictive terms of reference and Mr. Pearson's view, re-stated in Western Parliament, that the inquiry should be of an "employee-em-ployer nature," the order-in-council is broad enough to ensure Mr. Justice Wells virtually a free hand. But in addition the government has accepted the demand for a separate, full, judicial examination of security procedures and their impact upon civil rights, on terms to be worked out in consulation with the various par-

Nor is this all. The prime minister, who had already indicated dissatisfaction with Section 50 of the Civil Service Act —which permits dismissal without appeal—has now proposed remedial action when Parliament deals with a bill, al-ready prepared, for the introduction of collective bargaining in the service.

Puzzling Wire

The order-in-council of Monday is mewhat curious because it incorporates Mr. Spencer's telegram, as personally verified by the prime minister on Friday night. It was a puzzling wire because it mentioned, as one of the complaints, "the nature of the dismissal". What this implied no one knew.
If the judge was to determine only whether the Civil Service Commission had or had not exceeded its powers under Section 50, Mr. Spencer might secure not so much a hearing of his case as an assessment of the penalties posed upon him.

But in fact Mr. Justice Wells is to have "absolute discretion" to make such vestigation as he deems necessary into Mr. Spencer's complaints and he is to report "whether in his opinion, Mr. Spen-cer has been dealt with fairly." These not restrictive. As Mr. Pearson himself noted: It is natural that an inquiry into the nature of his dismissal and the rights which he may claim have been

Clipping the Gown

The Quebec government has reduced to $44,000,000 from $52,000,000 the amount it will give in aid to universities in 1966-But this cut was preceded by another important cut made by a special mittee formed by Education Minister Gerin-Lajoie last October. It is presumed that the original foreca university needs were about $60,000,000. This would mean that the universities had to take a total cut of almost 30 per

The case of McGill University stands out. Laval and the University of Montreal will receive $2,800,000 and $3,200,-000 more respectively in 1966-67; during this time McGill will have to content itself with a niggardly increase of $98,-000, which is not even equal to the increase in the cost of living during the same period

We haven't at hand all the statistics needed for a categorical judgment on the government's decision . . . We were impressed, however, by three factors which seemed soundly established:

At McGill, school fees are approximately 30 per cent higher than those paid by students at Montreal or

2. At McGill salaries paid to professors are substantially lower than those of professors at Montreal and Laval re-

3. At McGill, the teaching load on professors is heavier than it is at Laval or Montreal . . .

One understands that because well-known historical circumstances Montreal and Laval-should receive for an indefinite time more from the govment than McGill. In particular one understands that the government wants to take into account, in distributing grants, all sources of revenue of each stitution. But the reasonable limit of difference should be maintenance of true equality between the situation of sor and student in each institution. This limit now seems to have been exceeded in a manner which causes some worry as regards what is just. If that is the case, it is time to stop.

pose, lead into an inquiry into the nature of his offence.

The issue is thus settled. Mr. Spencer is to have his day in court, which is all that the critics demanded.

Unfortunately for the government, it has sustained a serious political reverse in this process of settlement. Early last ministers might still have yielded with good grace, especially if they had announced at the same time the far-reaching investigation of security procedures which Mr. Pearson offered on Monday. Instead they determined upon a defiant stand only to yield at the last moment amid scenes of melodrama

Astonishing Misjudgment

This astonishing misjudgment requires some reasonable explanation. The warning signals had been flying for weeks; indeed ever since Parliament assembled. Why were they ignored? A large part of the answer probably is that the ministers, in addition to their heavy legislative program, were simply too involved in major economic problems (including those discussed last week in Washington) and with such grave matters as the stresses within Confederation and external threats to attach serious importance to what probably seemed a shabby affair involving an obscure former postal employee.

But there may have been more to it than this. When ministers are distracted, overworked and attempting to sort things out after a major reorganization of government, they are probably in-clined, more than at other times, to rely prejudiced by that dismissal will, I sup- on the establishment and to ignore or, under-estimate a developing public opinion. When they hear of criticism, their instinct is to assure themselves that procedures have been followed and then to. turn their minds to other matters which may seem more worrying because they have yet to be covered by procedures. Governments should be protected against such mistakes by the private members. They have the time that mini sters lack. In this case, it was evident as anyone can determine from the pages of Hansard—that the Liberal back-benchers were well aware of the spreading concern in the country over Mr. Spencer's treatment. Unfortunately, big government has tended to separate the ministers from the members. (This was true also in Mr. Diefenbaker's time; to such an extent that the separation has continued even in opposition.) If the opposition leaders are too busy to keep touch with their followers, ministers must be in a much worse position.

Should Be Heard

In theory, caucus is supposed to take care of this; but, according to private members on both sides, there is a considerable gap between theory and reality. Backbenchers may often be a nuisance. But they are close to the people and their judgment may, for that reason, be less clouded than that of a busy minister. Governments are always full of good resolutions concerning private members but it sometimes requires a considerable shock, such as that administered by the Spencer case, to con-vince them that back-benchers should not only be seen but heard

Understatement

Your film reviewer (Mr. Norman Cribbens) commits an understatement when he says parts of the film "Darling," now showing at the Fox Theatre, are "frankly distasteful."

The whole thing is disgusting and an insult to the British people in general. Having been there only last year, I can say that the British people still have great qualities of courage, tolerance and goodwill and should not be represented abroad by films like "Darling."—L.D.J.

The action of the Victoria City Council in refusing permission for a group stage a Viet Nam War protest in Centennial Square seems to betray a lack of regard on the part of the council, for the public's right of freedom of

Victoria's Loss

I wonder how many people realize the loss that Victoria has suffered in the death of Mrs. H. C. Macdonald who so tragically lost her life in the recent crash of an aircraft at Tokyo Airport?

The Smile Show, but one organization, will always be indebted to her. During the many years when few people came to see our annual production, "Norma" brought groups of from ten to thirty friends every week, sometimes twice a week.

She encouraged people in every phase of the arts-musicians, singers, actors in legitimate theatre, choirs, sculptors, painters . . . and comedians. Many of our well-known Victoria artistic personalities owe an immense debt of grati-

Just a Tiny Cancer

If service facilities and a tourist lodge were being built would Thelwood Burn (in Strathcona Park) be chosen for a site? If all the land were free for purchase would the individual first pick a lot on Thelwood Burn? The mining community should not be regarded as sec-ond-class citizens.

Within the "inviolate parkland" (your remarks) a logging company has been permitted to log what was left of Thelwood Burn. The entire shores of Buttle Lake have been logged and the lake raised many feet to provide hydro-elec-tric power. This does not mean that the park should be further despoiled but balanced point of view of resource usage and conservation (in the true sense of the word) should be considered.

Private enterprise development of natural resources for a profit is an accepted fact in our society. There is a minimum of $112,000,000 gross value of metal in the ground. Strathcona Park is half a million acres of beauty penetrated by a handful of people each year, and the temporary loss of about 100 acres of forest to form a government supervised attractive community would be about 0.0002 per cent of this area.— W. G. Jeffery, 2005 Romney Road.

FROM WASHINGTON

By WALTER LIPPMANN But There Are Spheres of Influence

THE edginess which has appeared naive and idealistic followers of Wilson. recently among the President's principal advisers is a symptom of the frustration which is so pronounced in Congress and in the country. The frustration springs not from any fear that the Amer ican forces in Viet Nam can be defeated on the battlefield. The frus tration springs from doubt that there any other course still open except to escalate the war without any genuine prospect of ending it. The President is supported in Congress and in the polls because there seems to be no alterna-

Once the President had raised the stakes by investing 200,000 American troops, it made the fight predominantly American war. He had, as one of supporters remarked recently, painted himself into a corner.

From the perspective of the White use the pursuit of a military decision could lead to a confrontation with China the Soviet Union of both: On the other hand, the attempt to negotiate a truce raised unavoidably the question of whether President Johnson was prepared to negotiate with his enemies in the field, of whom some 80 per cent are iet Cong.

If for the time being we cannot do anything to dissolve the President's predicament, we can, at least, make an effort to understand how for 12 years we have slithered and now have slipped

Mishandled

In a preceding article I argued that the containment of Red China, which is a necessary objective of our policy, is being grossly mishandled by the President's principal advisers, Messrs. Rusk and McNamara. Their way of containing China has left us without the support, and in certain cases with the active opposition, of every great power in Asia. Yet if China is as expansionary as we think she is and must be contained it can be done only by a coalition of great powers concerned with Asia. In the preceding article I said too that the egregious result of our policy was hidd from view by a piece of well circulated political mythology—namely that the out-come of the fighting in South Viet Nam would decide China's foreign policy and the future of the Communist revolution on this planet.

I venture to believe that the root of the Rusk-McNamara misconception of foreign relations is a myth, propa gated since the First World War by the that all sovereign states, whether big or small, are not only alike in their human rights but alike also in their right to exercise influence in the world. I believe this to be a myth which falsifies the nature of things and the facts of life. It has rendered Mr. Rusk incapable of sound judgments in foreign policy.

In the Senate hearings, for example Mr. Rusk discussed with great moral fervor the conception of spheres of influence in international politics. They were inadmissable, he said. Therefore we could not recognize that China too might claim a sphere of influence. We were too pure for such worldly old things spheres of influence. But on what grounds we were doing what we have been doing in the past few years in Cuba, Guatemala, the Dominican Republic and Panama, Mr. Rusk was too dainty to say.

Cuban Example

For a foreign minister to deny that e treat the territory south of us as an merican sphere of influence, and that we did risk a world nuclear war to prevent the Soviet Union from entering it, and that we have suppressed revolution in the Dominican Republic on suspicion of the intrusion of foreign Communist influences-all this is so blatantly contrary to the facts that it is regarded everywhere else as extremely crude hypocrisy.

For my own part, I know of no seripolitics who attempts to deny that great powers will insist on spheres of influence which no other rival great power may enter with its military forces. This is one of the elementary facts which every competent foreign minister keeps in mind. It is a fact, just as the existence of two sexes is a fact.

Methods

While the existence of spheres of influence is undeniable, there can be great differences in how the great power ex-erts its influence. Historically, there was a revolutionary turning point in the evoution of the concept of spheres of influence when President Roosevelt de-clared that our Latin American policy would be the good neighbor policy. He did not say that we did not have a sphere of influence. He said that we intended to act within it, not as lords and masters, but as friends and partners with our neighbors. This was the progressive evolution of the classic concept of spheres of influence.

The Living World Between the Sand

DEUTSCHE KORRESPONDENZ

KIEL, West Germany Some time ago Professor A. Remane, a well-known marine oiologist of the University of Kiel, had the idea of investigating the interstices of the sands in the Baltic bay of his town in order to find out what kinds of animals were living Indeed, he found an entire interstitial microfauna of a special type which had made the tiny gaps between the sand grains its habitat. He called this habitat the mes sammalian, (Greek meso for between, and psammos, the sand.) Here is a living-space different from other sections of the sea.

The studies of Professor Remane met with great interest among the scientists of the world, and they began to look in the coastal sands all over the globe

New Class

These animals are very small, of course. Several hundreds of previously unknown species have mean-while been found in the mesopsammalian, living within an area which extend some 80 feet out into the sea from the shore. Not merely species, but whole families and orders of new animals were found, and indeed one new class.

microfauna of coast sands in cludes protozao, crustaceans, small echinodermates, and even tiny tunicates which are precur-sors of the prevertebrates.

Innumer a b l e millions of these animalcules populate the interstices between the sand grains, a place fairly well protected from external enemies. But inside there is perpetual war since most m e s o p sammalian animals prey on their neighbours.

The new class of mesop-sammalian worms which is quite unlike all known worms is known as the gnathostomu lida or little jaw-mouths These worms have a length of one-thirthieth to one-fifteenth of an inch, and only four species have been found. A fifth species found by Russian zoologist, Dr. Mamkayeff, in the Barent Sea proved identical with gnathos-tomula paradoxa known from

Finding Niche

The name is appropriate because these worms have indeed curious properties. Professor Peter Ax of Goettingen University is trying to find a niche for them in the zoological system but this is rather difficult on account of their peculiarities.

The presence of these paradoxical creatures is of general interest to the science of evolution. By conventional rules no such animal ought to

The first special character gnathostomulida is their flagellated epithel. The whole skin of the worm is covered beating flagellae all round. Unlike the ciliated epithel of other worms with several cilia on every cell, the cells of ulida bear only one worm as it moves along the tiny cracks of its habitation. No other animal from worms covered so completely with beating hairs, and no other worm has flagellated cells of this type.

Professor Ax cut-a piece from the skin of the worm and placed it under a microscope. The tissue disintegrated into individual cells, and in the end there were only single cells moving for-wards and backwards with the aid of their flagella, strikingly like the unicellular flagellata living in all waters.

No similar phene ever been seen in any other

WASHINGTON-A grim picture of juvenile delinquency
-with one out of every nine children expected to reach juvenile court before reaching 18 was drawn by the children's bureau of the U.S. Department of Health, Educaon and Welfare. The prediction, which did not take into account traffic offences, was based on na tionwide statistics gathered during 1964. They showed juvenile courts handled 686,000 cases, an increase of 14 per cent over those reported the

This set a record high. But the report was tempered with a notation that the high birth rate in the late 1940s may account for much of the increase. The children born then were 16 and 17 years old in 1964, and those are the peak years for juvenile delin-

Faster Rise

At the same time, Katherine B. Oettinger, head of the children's bureau, noted that delinquency cases rose 3½ times faster in 1964 than the four per cent increase that year in the number of children between 10 and 17 years

She stressed the urgency of speeding efforts to meet the needs of the growing child

Traffic cases involving juveniles also were up a whopping 21 per cent over the previous year. The report noted, however, that increased use of autos by juveniles and changes in procedure of keeping court records made the big jump less alarming.
The children's bureau report government clearly sees the same faults in the old one as did most of its critics in other African countries and beyond: a fact that promises the new military regime rapid acceptance and, what is more important, aid.

It has been quick to condemn the Nkrumah regime's tyranny, the wasteful unreality of many of its projects, its leftist leanings and its hostility to most of its neighbors. With the same neighbors. speed and forthrightness that its sister military regime in Nigeria has shown, the National Liberation Council has already announced plans to rectify the faults.

Within two days of the army's taking over, while the remnants of Dr Nkrumah's security forces were still reported to be cowering in dugouts under Flagstaff House, the council promised "as soon as practo draft a constitution that would "make it impossible for power to be concentrated in the hands of a single indi-vidual, and thus obviate the risk of arbitrary government which this country has only

For Referendum

This constitution, to be drawn up by a commission which would first hear evidence, would be submitted to a referendum, after which it would become "the funda-mental law of the land." Elections would follow, and the council would then "gladly relinquish their powers.' On the economic front General Ankrah, the council's chairman, announced baldly that "we are very close to famine." He has already appointed a high - powered economie committee, which is the first serious attempt in years at economic co-ordination. (The secretary of the state planning comm long flagellum each. state participation will be limited to certain basic and key projects." Some of the public corporations will be returned to private ownership. The new men's economic ideas are clearly still taking shape. General Ankrah was blunter about foreign policy. Dr. Nkrumah had paid mere lip-service to non-alignment, he said. Asked whether he would break with Russia or China, he replied "not yet:" and, asked about resuming relations with Britain, he said

"why not?"

He promised that the days harboring and training groups of emigres to subvert other African states are over. Such decisions promise to be as sure of a welcome in Africa (with the possible exception of Mali, Guinea and Tanzania) as in western

What is hard to dispel

The New Lumumba?

LONDON-Even those who are used to something always coming out of Africa have been surprised by the decision of Guinea's president, Sekou Toure, to elevate Ghana's former president, Kwame Nkrumah, to his equal as head of state

By this decision he achieved three immediate results: Nkrumah has been kept politifigure of some consequence; post-coup situation in Ghana is kept fluid and potentially dangerous, since Nkrumah's former supporters will be encouraged to withhold their loyalty from General Joseph A. Ankrah's new regime, and African and inter-national recognition of his regime may be delayed: and a new type of leadership for Africa's radical forces may emerge with Nkrumah as its spearhead.

In this way Nkrumahwhose political obituary was being widely written just a week ago—has been resur-rected to fill in the new role of a living Lumumba, com-mitted to fighting imperialism and neo-colonialism.

Nkrumah, Toure and Mali President Modeiba Keita have already committed the mselves to the view that Nkrumah's overthrow was due to "western imperialists."

filling up with new detainees faster than they are discharging old ones. It will take some time before all the detained ministers, party officiáls, editors and members of editors and members of parliament can be brought to trial (or released: the MPs are in protective custody

But the most popular phrase in Ghana right now is "no more dictators." It is striking that Ghana should now look like going this way when Nigeria, so much more diverse a country, seems to be moving towards a system headed by an executive presi-

Despite a shadow of nervousness, inevitable while the rejected father-figure broods in nearby Guinea (Accra airport is closed during the hours until further notice), the new regime already seems firmly and popularly in power.

Cast Aside

The ease with which the heavy ideological garment of Nkrumahism has apparently been cast aside is astonishing. The trade union congress had declared that unionism under the old regime was "a mockery" — and for good measure it has staged cereonial bonfires of Communist

However, Ghana's population is probably the most sophisticated in Africa in its grasp of the political and economic facts of life. Everyone knows about the economic problems. The errors — too rapid expansion of industry, top-heavy and unviable public c o rporations, ill-thought-out barter agreements, costly prestige projects already been diagnosed ad nauseam. What is now beginning to dawn on people is the scale of the trouble.

The economy's annual rate of growth, scheduled at 5.5 per cent in the defunct sevenyear pian, fell from 4.5 per cent in 1964 to 3.3 per cent

Record Deficit

The balance-of-payments deficit last year reached a record £79 million (the previous highest deficit had been £52 million in 1961).

Of 37 state-owned corporations, representing an investment of some £82 million, hardly one, was making a profit in 1965 and few showed any promise of ever making had been given suppliers' credits to the tune of £205 million, over half of them from private suppliers abroad and due to be repaid in five to seven years — that is, now. General Ankrah has booted out the man who presided over this economic mess. One

Women Boosting Status UNESCO Report Shows

GENEVA - Giant strides in emancipation of the world's women are revealed in a report submitted by the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women, which is now holding its 19th session in Geneva.

In Europe the number of women students has doubled in some parts, trebled in others in the past eight years: Belgium it has doubled in four years.

More spectacular advances are in the less-developed countries of the world. In five countries of the world. In five countries in Africa in the past 10 years the number of women students has been multiplied by seven, eight, 11, 12 and 16. Six Latin American ountries now have between twice and six times as many girls being educated as 10 years ago, and 15 Asian countries have between twice and 13 times as many.

Proportion Up

Almost everywhere, but especially in Asia and Africa, proportion of women in total student body has increased considerably since 1958; it has doubled in Ethiopia, Nigeria, Madagascar, Korea and Iran, and trebled in the Sudan, Afghanistan and

The report is based on a survey of 104 member states of UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) and covers a total student population of 13,400,000. It traces in broad outline the advance of women since the first college admit them in the States was opened in 1837. The first women's uni-versity in Britain (Bedford College) was opened in 1849. Japanese universities, now swarming with women stu-dents, did not admit them till 1946, and higher education for men in Afghanistan was not conceded until 1951. Coeducation at higher level is still not permitted in Saudi But almost every-else in the world women now have equal rights of admission to institutes of higher learning.

Most women students train to be teachers, but the next most popular subjects almost everywhere are literature and the fine arts. Many study to be doctors, and a recent trend is towards law and the social

Not Popular

Apart from the Soviet Union and some East European countries, engineering a nd technology are not popular with women. In the United States, men obtain nine-tenth of the degrees in engineering, law, medicine and com-mercial science, and three-quarter of the degrees in biology and mathematics. American women gain nearly all the diplomas in nursing and domestic science, three-quarters of the diplomas in librarianship and most of those in teaching and

In straight academic competition with men, women have come out top — that is, gained proportionately more awards in final examinations in Bolivia, Malaysia, The Netherlands and Pakistan. In recent years they have had a slight edge on men in Ger-many, New Zealand and

Water's Surface Tension Supports Tiny Creatures

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL Director, Provincial Museum

... The unruffled surface of pond or lake act as a perfect mirror. At certain angles it reflects back the reversed image of the shore and sky faithfully in every detail. A photograph of such a scene can unknowingly be viewed upside - down, so identical are the two halves of the picture.

This remarkable reflective ability is the result of the physical make-up of the water's surface. In contact with the air the molecules of water arrange them-selves in a thin continuous sheet which makes a perfect reflecting surface so long as it is undisturbed by ripples.

The individual molecules in any liquid are attracted to one another by a force akin to gravity. Thus drops of water when first formed are perfectly spherical in shape, the inter-mollecular forces causing the components of the drop to be drawn together to occupy the smallest volume possible, a sphere.

Of course when the drop begins to fall friction and other forces cause the shape to be moulded into the conventional streamlined form with a rounded front end and a taper-

No matter what shape the drop takes the outer surface is made up of molecules aligned side by side to form a kind of elastic skin which goes under the name of "surface ten-sion membrane." Despite its delicate nature, being only one molecule thick, the film is re-markably tenuous — enough to support relatively heavy objects such as a steel needle on

Some creatures are designed to take advantage of the support provided by this watery membrane. The water-spider or pond-skater, for example, skips nimbly over the surface without breaking through the film thanks to special design of the feet.

Under the right light conditions the de pressions in the surface membrane caused by insect's weight can actually be seen and the effect is accentuated by the series of halos and shadow rings cast on the bottom in shallow water on a sunny day. In fact the eye is often attracted by these light refractions rather than by the strider that causes them.

So also does the whirligig beetle make use of the surface film. This little bundle of energy, less than a quarter inch in length, gyrates in a dizzy manner tracing an intricate pattern on the top of pond or lake. Often many perform together, each one travelling at a fast pace, yet apparently never colliding with one another. When alarmed they dive through the surface membrane and swim rapidly to the bottom until the threat of danger passes.

* * * When they rise to the surface again they pop through the film perfectly dry as if the body and appendages are coated with a water-

So that the whirligig beetle can see in the air as well as in the water the eye is divided into an upper and lower half at the water line. As the insect cruises around on the surface with most of its body above water the lower section of the eye is submerged for vision beneath the film.

Insects other than the truly aquatic species are not adapted for dealing with the surface tension membrane in the water world and consequently they often get into trouble when they accidently light on the surface. Small forms are almost always trapped on contact with the surface film and remain imprisoned by its adhesive nature until they die of exhaustion or are eaten by a predator. Larger species may break through the membrane and eventually drown unless they are fortunate enough to come in contact with a solid object to which they can cling and pull themselves free of the water A few land-based creatures actually use the surface film to their advantage. Several types of spiders which habitually lurk in the vegetation around the edge of a pond are light-footed enough to run over the water's surface in search of prey. More remarkable is a small lizard of Central America which can also run on the top of water for a short distance—a stunt which sometimes proves to be a very effective escape mechanism.

The department provided figures Wednesday from what it called a "one - time survey" which showed that Negroes make up 14.8 per cent of the army force in Viet Nam, but have suffered 18.3 per cent of the deaths since January, 1961.

Negroes comprise 8.9 per cent of the marine total in Viet Nam but have suffered 11.3 per cent of the casualties.

When only enlisted men are counted, the army's Negro deaths jump to 22.1 per cent of the total casualties, and the ma-rines' Negro deaths are upped to 12 per cent.

The survey, reaching 98 per cent of military personnel in Viet Nam at the close of last December, showed 16,531 Nemarine corps, and 500 (5.8 per cent) in the navy (an estimate based on Negro numbers in the navy and around the world).

GEORGE ROYAL RATED AT 8-1 FOR SAN JUAN

The pricemaker at Santa Anita isn't too excited about the chances of George Royal in Saturday's $125,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Arcadia, Calif.

The B.C. horse, carrying 118 pounds and veteran Johnny Chorgen Royal last year won the San Juan over a mile and three-quarters on the turf. His total winnings stand at $215,000. Longden is retiring after the race. (See Hal Malone's column.)

Other horses in the race and their weights and odds: Hill Rise, 126, 3-1; Cedar Key, 124, 7-2; Straight Deal, 116, 15-1; Or et Argent, 120, 12-1; the entry of Polar Sea, 118, and Going Abroad, 116, 12-1; Tudor Fame, 115, 12-1; Aurelius II, 114, 15-1; O'Hara, 114, 12-1; Tom Cat, 114, 6-1, and Plaque, 114,

The race will be broadcast over CBS-TV Saturday at Winner's share of the purse is $75,000

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

With all the conversation about "amour toujour amour" coming out of Ottawa these days, this may not be an appropriate time to talk of love affairs.

However, let's not be Conservative. Let's take a Liberal

However, let's not be Conservative. Let's take a Liberal viewpoint. No Damm Politics involved here.

This is about a horse and a man. Make it four men. Apart from Northern Dancer who was bred to be an eristocrat and behaved like one, no thoroughbed has captured the hearts of Canadians as has George Royal.

In terms of breeding George Royal lacks the credentials to rank in the Equine's Who's Who. His father, Dark Hawk was not peasant stock. But they would never let him past the doorman at the Hilton Plaza with the likes of Bull Lea, Khaled and Hyperion. Khaled and Hyperion.

George's dam, Polly Bashaw, had a modestly successful eer. She won a few races and lost quite a few. Beyond with that background it is not surprising that Robert Hall of Aldergrove and Ernie Hammond of Vancouver believed Hall of Aldergrove and Ernie Hammond of Vancouver believed they had gone far enough when they purchased George for $3,200. In the deal they also obtained a twin filly, Nyet Nyet. She couldn't run around George, let alone a racetrack. If ever a thoroughbred lived up to its name, Nyet Nyet which means "No, No" lived up to her's.

But George grew up to be a strapping specimen with a cardiac manner of racing.

He would come out of the gate as if he had all day to the sign of the sign of the sign of the same than the same the same the same the same than the same the same the same the same than the same than get the job done and then when most of his backers were tearing their tickets and hair, he would put on a spurt and take it all in the last strides.

A 'Before' Example for Geritol

A year ago George reached the apex of his career. Over-looked by countless experts, he won the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano at Santa Anita.

Hall and Hammond were tickled green, a condition brought Hall and Hammond were uckied green, a condition brought about by warming their hands over 75,000 crisp Yankee dollars.

Johnny Longden, the geriatric marvel, was pleased too.

At 58 there was a growing chorus of turf intelligentsia who believed that the sands of time had drained the skills of the grandfather from Taber, Alta. The knockers had to zip their line when Longden proved otherwise.

ir lips when Longden proved otherwise.

Enter Donnie Richardson. A transplanted Texan who makes his home at Ladner, Richardson became George's housemother, trainer and exercise boy last fall. The partnership won the $50,000 Canadian Championship at Woodbine, finished fourth in the Laurel International after receiving a less than sterling ride from William Shoemaker, the midget

At Santa Anita this spring, George Royal won an overnight sprint allowance on the turf. Since then he has known of winner's circle only by hearsay.

He has been tardy in four races over a distance of ground on dirt and the turf. He has lacked his drive, run more like a "before" advertisement for Geritol.

Hammond and Hall have been criticized for letting George gallop gently rather than undergo a series of fast works designed to build up his speed.

Richardson has been rapped for staying with Longden Instead of utilizing Manuel Ycaza or Bill Hartack or Alvaro

Motivation Is There for Longden

Longden has been aboard only one winner in the last month, only seven at the meeting. He ranks so far behind the rest of his contemporaries he is not even listed in the jockey standings.

"I know what they're saying about Longden," Donnie Richardson was saying from Santa Anita Wednesday. "But they don't know all the facts. About a month ago, a two-year-old filly dumped him. John landed on his back. Racked him up pretty good. We only found out how bad a few days ago. Somebody in the room noticed he was wearing a brace. It came off today.

But change riders now? Why? We tried other boys. Nobody did as well. Besides, we have more reason than ever to put him up Saturday, don't we? Longden has all the skills. Because of his age and his success in outside enterprises he hasn't had to gung-ho like some of the others. But this will be his last chance. The motivation will be there."

Richardson was referring to Longden's decision, announced unexpectedly, to retire Saturday win, lose or draw. His last journey to the starting gate will be aboard George Royal in the $125,000 San Juan. They will travel a mile and Uo to Wednesday night many people who regularly attend events at the Royal Theatre, had regarded Spanish dance and particularly Flamenco as a sosteric art form, to be admired preferably in smallish doses.

But now that Jose Molina and his Balles Espanoles have come and gone, things will never be quite the same.

The dancers have a fine Royal.

But Molina, both in person and in his over-all concept, transcends the best.

Never, to my knowledge has a victoria a u dien ce been so fevered, so carried away; never has it so set the Royal's to make a world concert tour and his brilliant and musicianly handling of his instrument leaves little doubt that it will be

The other morning I was bouncing my car along a Saanich byway when the rain stopped, the sun came out, and from a brown field between subdivisions, a kite rose jerkily into the mid-

It wasn't flying right, though. It wheeled and cavorted, and finally swooped to a crash landing 60 feet or so from its pilots. These, a pre-school boy and a

That did it! The elongated red triangle rose splendidly behind the scampering pair, and this time held steady against its string bridle.

When I drove on with shopping instructions well-scram-bled in my head, the kite was still lifting, still climbing, spring's harbinger afloat in fitful March sunshine.

This was a kite of the most primitive sort.

Later in the year, you may lucky enough to happen along when vastly more sophisticated sky-cruisers are launched from the Beacon Hill

These are the kites of Asia, multi-colored, intricate creations in the shape of bird or dragon. In the steady flow of breeze, they drift and hover like exotic birds of prey.

A year or two ago on Cattle Point, I happened on a kits-man who was dropping airborne fishing gear far out from the shore rocks.

His carrier was a cleverly designed square of plastic mounted on a light frame and balanced with a shimmering red cellophane streamer that looked to be about 20 feet

The string was nylon monfilament stored on a trout reel and secured to the kite in a that permitted baited hook, sinker and a portion of line to dangle below.

It occurred to me that the kiting angler might find himself in an interesting situation if one of the larger ling cod that hang around the kelp were to grab his bait and I hung around hopefully.

The fisherman handled his rig with skill and verve and once reported a tug that might have been a nibble. But all he hooked was kelp, and when he pulled, his kite broke loose to settle in the wake of a mightily surprised

I once numbered among my seniors and betters a mar-vellously learned professor of Welsh extraction who retired from an English university to a cottage on an arbutus-fringed plateau overlooking Nanoose Bay. He was active as a squirrel, his mind was forever busy with one inven-tion or another, and he conceived the notion that he would design a box kite of a size to carry a human aloft.

I suggested that the cargo might take quite a bouncing but the professor beamed my objection away.

"Oh no," he said. "Pil take every precaution. My wife will be well-secured and cushloned."

We built the kite. The job took us a week and a day, such a bird as I marvel to

The professor then tested the wind with a licked finger, and summoned his wife from her kitchen.

She looked from the upended box-kite to his spectacled face on which anticipation and creative pleasure

Little Norse Gnomes Are Ideal Gift Items

By Penny Saver

Ever since I was a little girl (several years ago), tales and legends of fairies and "little men" have utterly fascinated men. As all children do, I thoroughly believed in Rip Van Winkle and his "howling buddles," and often wished for a winged horse like Pegasus, though nowadays he'd probably come equipped with jet-propulsion.

I thought some of the most intriguing stories were those about the mythological gods—especially the Scandinavian legends. Some of their most colorful characters were the little dwarfs who, as the tales go, lived in grand mansions of crystal and gold in caves under the hills.

Did you know that hairlines, eyebrows and necklines can be shaped with electrolysis? Some women also have underarm hairs removed There is now quite an upswing in the removal of hair on the legs and arms. This is no doubt due to the fact that dresses, even in winter, are so often sleeveless and skirts are so, so short. Many women have tired of the almost constant attention they must give to this grooming if temporary methods are used. Mrs. Mehlman reminds us that folks see us from the back as well as the front and that women pay too little attention to their back hairline, Raising the hairline at the back makes the neck appear longer. A new hairline can change the whole

Some women have hair on the abdomen, breasts or back. There is no need today to feel unfeminine because of this be-cause the hairs can be so successfully removed permanently by electrolysis.

Readers frequently ask me about the cost of electrolysis. This depends to a great extent on how many treatments are required. I think that most electrolysists are willing to co-operate with the patient and work out some sort of budget plan, paying by the week month, depending on the individual case. Talk with your electrolysist about this. Be honDEAR ABBY ...

Opening lead-AK

was not one of those play-by-the - year bids. Most players would have bid either four diamonds or three no-trump. A four-diamond bid would have led to an easy five diamonds, a three no-trump call to an even easier no-trump contract.

Once South bid four spades North was interested in a grand slam. Hence, his bids of five clubs and five hearts to show those two aces but South realized that he had reached his limit when he bid four spades. West might have opened a heart, in which case South would have had to go down one trick, but West made the apparently safe lead of the king of spades and South had a good play for

He needed to set up a third club trick for a discard of The simple way to go about that would have been to play king-ace and a third club. This would win against a 3-3 club break. It would also win if the play of the king

The simple way is not the best or expert way here The expert way is to lead the three of clubs from dummy after drawing trumps and finesse the nine spot. If that wins there is no further problem. If it loses, you go back to dummy and finesse the clubs once more. This play wins as long as West does not hold both club honors. If he does, the expert comes out looking like a dunce.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

NBC-TV is the first of the major networks to re-lease its 1966-67 schedule of prime-time programs. All 28 of the shows will be in color.

The network made only 10 new program changes, considered a new low for the industry.

The new schedule does not list the following shows: Branded, Wackiest Ship in the Army, The John Forsythe Show, Hullabaloo, both episodes of Dr. Kildare, Mona McCluskey. Camp Runamuck, Hank, The Sammy Davis Show and Mr. Roberts.

The fall schedule reads as follows: Monday: 7:30 p.m., The Monkees; 8 p.m., I Dream of Jeannie; 8:30 p.m., Roger Miller

Show; 9 p.m., The Road West with Barry Sullivan; 10 p.m., Run for Your Life. Tuesday: 7:30 p.m., The Girl From U.N.C.L.E.

(with Stephanie Powers); 8:30 p.m., Occasional Wife (with Michael Tallant and Patricia Harty); 9 to 11 p.m., Tuesday Night at the Movies.

p.m., Tuesday Night at the Movies.

Wednesday: No changes—7:30 p.m., The Virginian:
9 p.m., Bob Hope Theatre; 10 p.m., I Spy.

Thursday: 7:30 p.m., Daniel Boone; 8:30 p.m., Star
Trek (science fiction with William Shatner); 9:30 p.m., The Hero (comedy with Richard Mulligan); 10 p.m.,

Dean Martin Show. Friday: 7:30 p.m., Tarzan (with Ron Ely); 8:30 p.m., The Man From U.N.C.L.E.; 9:30 p.m., T.H.E. Cat (adventure with Robert Loggia); 10 p.m., Laredo.

Saturday: 7:30 p.m., Flipper; 8 p.m., Please Don't Eat the Daisies; 8:30 p.m., Get Smart; 9 p.m., Saturday Night at the Movies.

Network officials say the new schedule is "locked in," whatever that means. By the time the other net-works release their fall time schedules, NBC-TV could easily make wholesale changes. So stay tuned Industry began to adopt automation in a big way after the Second World War. Some people hail it as a glorious Second Industrial Revolution—and—so it is. Some claim that automation is taking away the jobs and even the careers of many people—and so it is.

The key to all this automation is the feed back of information that makes the machinery change or adjust its operations. This data may be gathered by electric eyes and sensitive cells, by microphones and an assortment of electronic devices. In a large factory, this data is by microphones and an assortment of electronic devices. In a large factory, this data is analyzed by a computer. And the computer is the star performer of automation. It can keep tabs on endless data from eter registers this point and a signal is fed back to the furnace, which automatically shuts itself off. If the temperature falls below 65, this data is fed back and the furnace clicks on again. An automatic washer has a built-in timer that triggers the machinery through cycle of operations.

In major jobs of automation, many different machines work together to keep up continuous production. In the auto industry, a whole engine can be made by automation. A block of metal is fed into, machinery and automatically sent through 530 different processes. In 14.6 minutes, the automation system delivers a finished engine. At the same time, one man selves. Those with math and content of the carries of electronic devices. In a large factory, this data is analyzed by a computer. And the computer is the star performer of automation. It can keep tabs on endless data from a team of machines and solve the problems needed to keep the automation running continuously. A top computer can free half a million people from their paper work. Automation takes away their jobs. Hence, our next project is to build a society in which we can enjoy the advantages of our labor saving automation—without its disadvantages.

The birth and growth of automation is the most important event of our century. It affects all our lives and our answers to its problems will set the stage for the future. ### RESIGNATION REMARK MADE IN SUPPORT CALL

OTTAWA (CP)-Did Prime Minister Pearson tell the Liberal caucus Wednesday he would resign in three months?

Reports Thursday in Montreal and Toronto newspapers said he did. The prime minister's office said:

"We are denying that categorically and completely."

A realistic caucus source says there was mention of resignation but not in the terms mentioned in the Montreal

Paper Says PM to Resign

MONTREAL (CP)—Le Devoir says Prime Minis-ter Pearson assured a caucus of Liberal MPs and file to say that Mr. Diefenbaker senators in Ottawa Wednesday that he will resign as party leader within three months, and improve his ways of running things in the meantime.

The French-language daily says in a headline dispatch from Ottawa that Mr. Pearson did so to prevent the resignation of Justice Minister Lucien Cardin and the cabinet split that this would have caused.

Mr. Cardin and three other Quebec ministers — Jean Marchand, immigration; Jean-Pierre Cote, postmaster-general; and Leo Cadieux, associate defence — had been preparing to leave the cabinet.

Mr. Card in had already written his letter of resignation and sent it to Mr. Pearson, the newspaper says. It was not until late Tuesday night, following a private dinner with Mr. Pearson and conversations with Walter Gordon, Maurice Lamontagne and Rene Tremblay — all of whom left the cabinet recently whom left the cabinet recently.

$500,000 GEM THEFT BY DARING BANDITS

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)-Three well-dressed bandits, all wearing gloves and sunglasses, took an estimated half million dollars in gems from a jewelry store Wednesday and escaped unnoticed into a crowd of downtown shoppers.

"They obviously knew what they were after and where it was kept," police said. "They're prob-ably out of the country by now."

There were no customers in the Davidson and Licht jewelry store when the men entered and ordered all the employees to flee downstairs to a basement office.

Mr. O'Grady pointed out that the holder of a water licence also has control of the land surrounding the water insofar as it might affect the water suplement.

This would mean that if Central Saanich gained a licence to take water from the Elk-Beaver area it would also have control of the park area with powers of expropriation.

RESIGNATION REMARK MADE IN SUPPORT CALL

OTTAWA (CP)-Did Prime Minister Pearson tell the Liberal caucus Wednesday he would resign in three months?

Reports Thursday in Montreal and Toronto newspapers said he did. The prime minister's office said:

"We are denying that categorically and completely." A realistic caucus source says there was mention of resignation but not in the terms mentioned in the Montreal and Toronto reports.

He says that the prime minister told the caucus that if it had no confidence in him he would resign and that if Justice

Paper Says PM to Resign

MONTREAL (CP)-Le Devoir says Prime Minister Pearson assured a caucus of Liberal MPs and senators in Ottawa Wednesday that he will resign as party leader within three months, and improve his ways of running things in the meantime.

The French-language daily says in a headline dispatch from Ottawa that Mr. Pearson did so Quebec ministers — Jean Marchand, immigration; Jean-Pierre Cote, postmaster-general; and Leo Cadieux, associate delence — had been preparing to leave the cabinet.

Mr. Cardin had already written his letter of resignation and sent it to Mr. Pearson, the resignation was submitted to newspaper says. It was not until Prime Minister Pearson in late Tuesday night, following a writing in a sealed envelope private dinner with Mr. Pearson Tuesday, Justice Minster Lucien and conversations with Walter Cardin told a press conference Gordon, Maurice Lamontagne today, and Rene Tremblay — all of whom left the cabinet recently that he decided to withdraw it, concerned over the consequences his departure might

The minister said he had sent over and got the resignation back from the prime minister's office. The prime minister had never opened it.

Le Devoir says, steps had been taken in high party circles to accept Mr. Pearson's resignation and designate External Affairs Minister Paul Martin his successor.
